

ARTS & CULTURE IN SAN FRANCISCO

Known for its rich culture and diverse art scene, it's no surprise that even the terminals in San Francisco's international airport are a museum. The city's celebrated cultural legacy continues to grow—not only is the city home to the country's oldest ballet, the oldest flower conservatory in North America, and up to 200 world theatre premiers, it also doesn't take much searching to immerse yourself in the arts every day. Here's just a handful of some of the city's artistic highlights:

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

The San Francisco Conservatory of Flowers has 5 galleries

1700 species of flowers

from over 50 countries

10 = 10 countries

17% of San Francisco's 49 square miles is park land

98% of residents have a park within 1/2 mile of their home

GALLERY VIEWS

19 galleries are located in the airport terminal museum at SFO

43 million passengers passed through the galleries last year

65% of the artists featured in the international terminal's permanent installations are from the Bay Area

28,666 works in the SFMOMA's collection

works in the SFMOMA's collection

636,057 visitors passed through the SFMOMA in 2011

visitors passed through the SFMOMA in 2011

100,000 visitors

ON THE STAGE

There are more than

400 theatre and dance companies in the SF Bay Area

theatre and dance companies in the SF Bay Area

3,000 actors, directors, playwrights, technicians and designers

600 = 600 people

The San Francisco Ballet has

550 dancers training at the school and presents upwards of 100 performances each year

dancers training at the school and presents upwards of 100 performances each year

Bay Area theatres offer 100 to 200 world premieres each year

